The Fund aims to focus its investments on no more than three countries at a time. The Fund invests mainly in shares and share-based instruments.

The Fund may use forward foreign exchange contracts for both hedging and investment. Risk and reward profile

The Fund's risk category describes the Fund's risk and reward ratio and variations in the fund unit value over the previous five (5) years. In the risk indicator, 1 signifies low risk and 7 signifies high risk. The current risk rating of the PYN Elite Fund (non-UCITS) is 6, as the Fund's value fluctuations are subject to high risk. Even the lowest risk category (1) is not fully risk-free.

The fund's risk-return profile and risk class may not be constant and may change over time. The risk class of the fund is based on the historical volatility of the fund unit and, as such, provides an inadequate picture of the fund's future risk level. Historical data cannot be used as a basis for forming reliable estimates about the future.

When investing in shares, there is a risk of fluctuation in market value of the investment based on general economic development and/or extraordinary events like changes in political or legislative environments. The Fund focuses on investments in one or at most a few countries in emerging markets and makes substantial allocations to individual companies, which increases the risk of volatility significantly compared to funds with more broadly diversified portfolios. The Fund mainly invests in securities denominated in other currencies than the euro, implying a foreign exchange risk to the Fund's investments. It is also important to consider the following risk factors, which affect the fund unit value and are not discernible directly from the risk indicator above.

Risk related to view and investing style: Active portfolio management always carries the risk that the portfolio manager will be unsuccessful in his/ her investment choices. The Fund aims at focusing on investments in small number of markets and countries and targeting substantial allocations to individual shares and companies.

Liquidity risk: Only a small portion of the Fund's assets is in cash. There is a risk that the investments cannot be converted into cash within the planned time and at the desired price. In emerging and peripheral markets, liquidity can have a substantial effect on the return from investments. The Fund may also invest in securities that are not subject to public trading.

Foreign exchange risk: The assets of the Fund carry a foreign exchange risk as the Fund mainly invests in non-euro denominated currencies.

Operative risk: Risk of losses relating to the Fund due to insufficient internal procedures or faults relating to persons, the organization, contracting parties or systems, data protection or technologies and attacks against them as well as other external events, including custody of the assets.

Counterparty risk: The Fund bears the risk of the counterparty of a security transaction or issuer of a security or derivative being unable to or unwilling to honour its obligations, such as delivery or payment of securities or otherwise acting against agreement.

Derivatives risk: Using derivatives for hedging or risk management may decrease risk and expected profits. However, use of derivatives, even for hedging, may for example increase market, currency, liquidity, counterparty and operative risks. The Fund may also use derivatives contracts as part of its investment activity.

The risks are described more in detail in the Fund Prospectus, which is available at the website www.pyn.fi.
